The layers can be "smart" and enable the user to easily identify which layers should be viewed at any time. A layer is a stack of drawings that are combined into a single drawing. Layers are "smart" and will display the same drawing as any other layers. For example, if one layer is a combined drawing of 10 buildings, then a "smart" layer can display just the drawings of the 10 buildings, then if a new drawing is opened that is only a drawing of a single building, the layer's display is updated to only show the building being viewed. Layers are used to provide a working set. A workgroup allows for the functionality of a project folder. A workgroup is a folder with files that can be shared. Any changes made to the workgroup are shared with the entire team. Workgroups can be used with folders to organize files. When a workgroup is opened, its files are displayed within the shared folder. The shared folder can be set to be the current workgroup or to be the main directory. The user can only see files in the workgroup he is currently viewing or the shared folder. Layers are essentially views of a project. A view is a section of a drawing and consists of all the layers of that drawing. A view is specified with a shape. The workgroup function allows sharing work that has been changed within a workgroup, but 5b5f913d15
