Paramedic medications was created as a small and accessible test that's been specially built for paramedics. Paramedic medications is a unique software that can help you learn more about Cardizem, Dopamine, Adenosine and Magnesium Sulfate. Cardizem is the trademark for a class of heart stimulants used in heart disease treatment. Dopamine is a natural chemical found in the body that stimulates the centers of the brain involved in the "feel good" or pleasure. Adenosine is a natural chemical that acts on the heart, airways, brain and nervous system. Magnesium Sulfate, also called Mag sulf, is a medication commonly given to women with premature labor to prevent fetal injury or death. The basic purpose of the paramedic medications test is to help you do drug investigations, create ambulance care skills, search about drugs and nursing schools and then test your knowledge, all in one software. The paramedic medications software is located at this URL: Since the paramedic medications test is free to use it can help you learn more about paramedic medications, Cardizem, Dopamine, Adenosine and Magnesium Sulfate...etc. Stepping on Cocaine, Heroin, and Meth This video will cover the signs of stepping on cocaine, heroin, and meth for first responders. Choosing OAT Authorization - Part 2 This is the second video in my series intended to provide overall guidance for those faced with the task of authorizing a patient's overdose antidote treatment. In this video, we'll focus on two of the more challenging scenarios presented by the authorization process for the OAT patient: the first is the OAT patient who is resistant to being treated, and the second is the OAT patient that is in cardiac arrest. In order to authorize an OAT treatment on an overdose patient, the first thing you need to do is identify whether the treatment should be limited to the actual overdose incident, or should be appropriate to the patient's "reason to live." Next, you have
