Open the registry editor: regedit | ntfs -c | sudo tee /root/dst/noexec Remember to store your mapping type in /etc/multipath/mapping We press BAT and wait for the System to find all the ports that we need to connect. Look in the text for something that will allow you to make sure that all ported devices are found: cntdll - this command allows you to load a list of devices without loading the computer itself. allow - if there are no current devices in the table, you can create them by pressing enter. If there are already devices in this table, just follow the path chown /dev/ttyS2 as xp1 as usual. /dev is a directory with files for devices. apps - is a file with customized applications. auth is the certificate that is used on this computer for authentication (via the Windows Logon Process). multidirectory - creates a directory for all devices belonging to this computer. enterprise - creates one or more ports. network - opens a port for connecting to a remote system. server - Assigns a username/password for the user associated with the remote computer. iptables - controls files (iptcache or ipfw). crypt - creates and saves your
