Palm and hand characteristics of professional golfers. To provide information on hand and palm characteristics of professional golfers. Descriptive study. On 48 professional golfers, 48 measurements were performed with a digital caliper. The mean values of the palmar lines (between the first and second metacarpals and between the third and fourth metacarpals) were 15.8 mm and 9.7 mm, respectively. The mean value of the first metacarpal breadth was 10.5 mm and that of the second metacarpal breadth was 6.8 mm. The mean total palm length was 25.8 mm. Of the 48 measurements, the greatest mean value was 11.9 mm for the first intermetacarpal distance and 9.9 mm for the second intermetacarpal distance. The palm length was negatively correlated to handgrip strength. The hand and palm characteristics of professional golfers, compared with those of nonprofessional golfers, were found to be different. These data can be useful to develop, in the future, new methods to diagnose or prevent injuries to professional golfers.
