power let it create sharp, realistic graphics from both Xbox One and PlayStation 4 games. It was more than enough to draw feedback from developers and consumers alike, and it might even be enough to push Microsoft and Sony to make their own machines capable of displaying at that level. With a new GPU and a handful of new APIs, Microsoft's and Sony's next-gen-console chips might be more powerful than all of the graphics processing power built into this machine. OxtremeFX 1.45 Crk.Negative regulation by glucocorticoids of albumin synthesis and secretion in rat hepatocytes. The effect of glucocorticoids on albumin synthesis in hepatocytes of fed rats was studied by measuring the incorporation of [14C] leucine into albumin and by the determination of albumin concentrations in the cell culture medium. In the presence of dexamethasone (2-200 nM) the synthesis of albumin increased about 2-fold in a dose-dependent manner, and the rate of albumin secretion was decreased by about 50% in parallel. In the presence of similar concentrations of hydrocortisone, addition of the hormone did not affect the rate of albumin synthesis but decreased albumin secretion. During 48 h of culture, in the presence of the glucocorticoid, the rate of albumin secretion into the cell medium decreased significantly, even though [14C]leucine incorporation into albumin increased by 25%. In contrast to most other synthetic enzymes, albumin, which is secreted into the medium as a component of the hepatocyte, is maintained intracellularly by a continuous supply of it from the cell. Thus, the reduction of albumin secretion by hydrocortisone could reflect the regulatory effect of this hormone on the synthesis of intracellular albumin, because both processes have to be tightly coupled to sustain a constant album
