When you have the above line, you can browse your web server index.php file and it will read the script and treat it as if it was part of your web server. Right click on the index.php file in the bin folder. Then click Open With Then click Edit and select your favorite plain text editor. It is very important that you don't put anything other than the above code in your index.php file. Then press Run. Note that your php code will not work. Instead it is just a way to allow you to have a command line window. Let's change it a little bit and we will call the script update in the cmd line: We can also use WAMP. This is less convenient but faster. In case you are new to it, I will give you the steps. Open the WAMP folder. You will have to create a new shortcut on your desktop. The shortcut should point to your directory with index.php (bin), index.html and index.htm. Press the WAMP icon on your desktop. The shortcut is created. On the icon, click change Icon. Click Browse. The Choose Icon window will appear. In the list of icons, locate index.php. This is your web server. Then click OK. When you click OK, the icon will display. Now your web server is running. When you open your file www.domain.com on your web browser, you should have access to your web server's files. You should be able to change them.
