The label is declared in the body part of the master page. I am using ASP.Net MVC 3 A: Make sure you place your label in head or master and don't in the body. Hello World Put your master file in ~/Views/Shared/Site.Master and make sure you don't put a runat="server" on your aspx file. Any control which resides inside of an aspx file can be used inside of a head or master file since they don't require a runat="server" attribute. For a label this means you can use: model.FirstName, "My first name")%> A: If you want to achieve this by code,then you may add label on master page by following code if (HttpContext.Current.IsDebuggingEnabled) { Label lb = (Label)Master.FindControl("labelname"); } Here I began to notice the potential that was offered, all round... I felt a release in my body as the world seemed to become silent...
