We assessed the radiographic calcification of 7 femoral head augmentation devices in vitro by measuring the zone of calcification on anteroposterior and mediolateral radiographs. The developed models of TEN-HP (Wright); Osteogen III (Aesculap); Peep-Plug; J-STOP (Wright); and tri-lock (Stryker) devices were each incubated in autologous blood, and the next day they were imaged. We measured the calcification zone from superior to inferior and from anterior to posterior. The median measurement from the peripheral rim (for the parameters we measured) was 5.3 mm (TEN-HP), 7.1 mm (Osteogen III), 4.7 mm (Peep-Plug), 7.9 mm (J-STOP), and 6.4 mm (tri-lock). Variability was greatest for the TEN-HP and J-STOP models. Radiographic evidence of calcification occurred after 5 days with the TEN-HP model, 10 days with the Osteogen III model, and 6 weeks with the Peep-Plug, J-STOP, and tri-lock models. Of the 7 models, 4 are currently available in Europe, Canada, and Japan. The calcification of these models varied widely in vitro, and the pattern of calcification influenced the suitability of each device. As a result, clinical judgment is required when choosing an augmentation device. full potential in two years. The latest News of SHUTKY New Updates Since 2012 From SHUTKY Reminder of Commitment! Latest Tweets Latest Posts Shiny in its new BBS After working through the recent patch and fixing several glitches, the Xbox 360 version of Tera is ready for release.Q: JQuery UI Draggable - move items on click I am using the JQuery UI Draggable to move items (from one list to another, within the original list). I understand that by calling $("li").draggable() I am making the entire list draggable. I also want the item to move to a specific location. How can I have the elements in my list move to a specific location on click, and then be moved as the user drags the entire list. I don't want the user to be able to drag the items. This is code that works, however the objects are not moved to a new list when I click the item. Is there something I'm missing? $( "#element" ).draggable(); $("#drop").droppable({ drop: function( event, ui ) { var element = $(ui.draggable); $(this).append(element); }, over: function( event, ui ) { $(this).addClass("over"); $(this).addClass("ui-state-hover"); }, out: function( event, ui ) { $(this).removeClass("over"); $(this).removeClass("ui-state-hover"); }, handle: '.handle' }); A: You can append the element like this: $(function(){ var element = '#element'; $('#drop').droppable({ drop: function( event, ui ) { $(this).append(

A deadline set by the European Parliament for leaders to back the merger of the two Grand Duchies has passed without Luxembourg sending a formal response to Brussels. However, Commissioner Margrethe Vestager, a Luxembourg MP who is in charge of competition and state aid, welcomed the result and said she would work to secure a "fairer, more competitive EU."
