The long-term effects of acute doses of vitamin D3 on growth, skeletal maturation and plasma 25OHD concentrations were studied in 10-12 week old male Sprague Dawley rats. Vitamin D3 was administered at doses of 50, 100 and 200 IU/kg per day for 28 days via an osmotic pump. At the end of the experiment the animals were killed and bone and muscle tissues were removed, weighed and assayed for testosterone, 25OHD and calcium. Vitamin D3 treatment did not cause any significant changes in the skeletal parameters examined, although some animals treated with the 100 and 200 IU/kg doses showed evidence of growth retardation in comparison with controls. Compared to the control group, plasma 25OHD concentrations were significantly higher in the 50 IU/kg group on Day 28, but there was no difference in 25OHD concentrations between the 50 IU/kg group and controls on Days 14 and 21. The concentrations of 25OHD in the 20, 50, 100 and 200 IU/kg groups were lower than that in the control group on Days 14 and 21. It is suggested that in the treatment regime used in the present study the 100 IU/kg dose is the most appropriate for use in male Sprague Dawley rats and that the plasma concentrations of 25OHD required to achieve these levels are likely to occur if daily intake of vitamin D for approximately one year were to be achieved.Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Carson Wentz (11) runs in for a touchdown as Buffalo Bills outside linebacker Preston Brown (57) follows during the first half of an NFL football game on Sunday, Oct. 28, 2016, in Philadelphia. Smithsonian on U.S. History: Founding Fathers and Thanksgiving Time Travel Travels on the Local: Lots of Business Select Episode a Select episode Select Episode Select episode Hey, guys! Guess what? Michael Falk heard about our new segment. Well, not about the THURSDAYS thing, because he wasn't around for that. The THURSDAYS thing wasn't about the new THURSDAYS thing. NOOO. What he heard about was our WEEKDAYS thing. YES. It wasn't an easy job to get off the ground. In fact, it took us several years. But then, we started getting the kind of approvals you would expect from an organization as public-spirited as yours: The New York Times, NY Magazine, Wall Street Journal, National Geographic. In fact, Barbara Walters called us for an interview. She never took us up on it, I don't think. But if she had, it would have been quite an experience. Here, a sample quote from her CV: "I like television that is also valuable in the marketplace." —Barbara Walters, the Mother of All Reality Stars. We were the envy of just about every other network. We'd placed a number one-ranking ad on a bag of potato chips! What's that, you ask? Here's the ad, yes, with that bag of potato chips: Really. We set it up that way. By "we" I mean "Mad Cat." Here's how the process worked: Every time we reached the 100th episode, we would get approval to extend our airtime. When we reached the 200th episode—which was a new record—we were told we'd have to sell more chips to make it all worthwhile. Not that we weren't, well, delighted. We figured we'd find a hundred other funny cats for you to enjoy each week. What could go wrong? So what do we do when the recording comes in and the cat's—gulp—a little...short? It was that first one, of course, a cat called Bernie Shuntz the Echidna. So, again: Bernie Shuntz the E
