d.append((x, y)) def add2(s): for i in s:
    i = 2 * i return(d)

add2(int(input('Please give the list of numbers: '))) main()

When I run this code, it asks for an input and then says "ValueError: too many values to unpack (expected 2)" (which tells me the last line doesn't work) and then

"AttributeError: 'int' object has no attribute 'append'" (which is because the line "d.append((x, y))" doesn't work because int can't be a list) How can I fix this so the code works? A:

The problem you're running into is that if you add to a list, it can only be done at once. If you want to be able to add to the list incrementally, it has to be a list of tuples or a list of lists. I'll show you with a list of tuples:

def main(): d = []
def add(x, y):
d.append((x, y))
def add2(s):
    for i in s:
        i = 2 * i
```
