AN UNCERTAIN APPROACH NEW TESTAMENT AND ENGLISH BIBLE WITH AMHARIC TRANSLATION. Human iNOS promoter polymorphisms are functionally important in endothelial cells. Nitric oxide (NO) is a potent vasodilator released by activated endothelial cells (ECs). ECs release NO by activation of inducible NO synthase (iNOS). iNOS expression can be induced by proinflammatory cytokines such as tumor necrosis factor alpha (TNFalpha). It is unknown how polymorphisms in promoter region of the human iNOS gene influence NO-mediated functions in vascular cells. In the present study, we analyzed 12 polymorphisms in the human iNOS promoter for functional effects on iNOS expression in ECs, using a luciferase reporter gene assay. The transfection efficiency was confirmed by a GFP-expression-based cell selection system. We compared the activity of each promoter in both APOL1-positive and negative human ECs and human umbilical vein (HUVEC) cells. The endothelial-restricted transcriptional activity was measured by the ratio of luciferase activity in ECs to
