Adventure role-playing game Open world design Basic crafting system Hundreds of unique enemies with fully animated behavior Capabilities to fight many different monsters in one fight Permanent death effects In Harsh Survival you start off with a settlement that you protect. They grow and trade with other settlements, once you've grown with them, you can choose to 'join' them or not. This allows you to go on adventures and fight monsters with other people, or you can fight them alone. Your characters evolve based on the choices you make, your character's attributes, and choice of skills. Character Creation: Attributes are your fighting and survival attributes (strength, dexterity, vitality, endurance, perception) and choose two skills (The fighting skills will get better through different combat types, such as slash and block. The second you learn depends on your character.) Character Class: One of seven different character classes. Hunter - Fast and strong, armsman has a variety of melee weapons (spears, swords, axes) and the ability to shoot, their bonus is physical damage. Rogue - Fast and strong, rogue has double the movement bonus and can lift twice the normal load, using daggers and short bows. Warrior - A tank who will shrug off damage and have great endurance, although weak in the attack skills. Clairvoyant - Powerful psychic, can see the future and communicate with animals and a nearby settlement to get more resources. Clairvoyants gain extra experience from monsters and are immune to sleep and death effects. Engineer - You will never have a shortage of tools and can use them very efficiently. A great example of this skill is repairing equipment in the settlement and crafting items that require the resources you find. Mage - Skillful with magic items, can stack more items and get more from the items when they break. They are immune to many effects. Alchemist - Have many potions and love to cook. Their main use is to brew potions to heal multiple creatures or stack the effects to gain more (in rare situations potions can be stored). Architect - Gather materials and build amazing structures with tons of bonuses. Their main use is to build defensive and offensive structures but also has the great ability to repair, petrify and build bridges. They gain a lot of experience from monsters and buildings. World Design: There are 5 main regions in Harsh Survival. c9d1549cdd

The sand would somehow be passed down to their progeny, which would further increase the sands' amount of blessings. The fewborn would carry the sands even greater than their ancestors had done, strengthening their bodies to become heros in their chosen field. People born on the sands of Tojo called these people sand people. They were heroes who chose their own fate, inspired by the goodness of their forefathers. They were the sand people. The sands of Tojo were made up of the blessed sands of the island's namesake. It was natural for Tojo to have sand people as the sages had been instructed to tell the people of the region that they should endeavor to bear their own blessed sands in the hopes that they could be blessed by the power of the sands themselves. A sand person will hear the call of the sands in their dreams and subconsciously know what to do when they awake. Sand people are often born with naturally athletic bodies or possessed of the holy traits of strength and generosity. There are two types of sand people: sand people and sand. Sand people are blessed with the sands within them, granting them special abilities. Sand people are not blessed with the sands, however their nature still shines with a naturally positive aura. Most sand people seek to live as heroes and become defenders of justice. They live as best they can within the ebb and flow of the sands. Sand and sand people have many similarities. In some ways, they can even be mistaken for one another. However, sand people are slightly less enlightened than sand. About This Content Battle Commander 2 is a fast-paced 4X strategy game Survival is a strange, irrational and often unfair game. You only have one chance to get it right, so choosing to flee or fight is the most important decision you'll ever make. Lure foes into a narrow corridor and stab them to death with a knife. Kill them with a hammer or attach a bomb to their back. Crush them with your bare hands. Sink slowly into the depths of the earth. Slash them with a machete or mix their blood with a chemical. How will you respond to the challenges of the world around you? Befriend the people you meet, or keep them at arms' length? Understand? Are the people the same as the things that threaten you? Grow a beard? Grow a moustache? Grow a heart? In this strange, intelligent and bitter game, it's up to you to decide. How to survive is up to YOU! A: I think I did something like this in my recent game (personal project), although it was still in the making for several years: Playdead's explanation of the game is really good and it inspired me to try and make a first-person survival game... then I made one which is not first-person (but closer to your game: Here's an interview with the creator of the game: Here's a Flash game from Playdead which shows the game running, and may be of interest to you as it feels a bit like you're trying to survive in a city: // Created by cgo -godefs - DO NOT EDIT // cgo -godefs types_linux.go // +build aix // +build ppc64 package unix const (sizeofPtr = 0x8 sizeofShort = 0x2 sizeofInt = 0
