A user-training method and evaluation]. A multi-functional neurorehabilitation device, CANMOVE (Centre for Neurorehabilitation with Orthopedic, Neuro-Muscular, and Electrical Supports), was used for the first time during a training process with stroke patients. In order to evaluate the feasibility of the system, a quality management system was developed and implemented. During the training process the pedagogical requirements of the system and the participation of the trainee were analyzed and assessed qualitatively. With regard to the demands of the system, the trainee demonstrated increased knowledge and understanding of the system functions and the usability of the system (respectively 72/84 [87%] and 81/84 [96%], respectively) during the training process. During the inter-individual training trials it was found that trainees can acquire the necessary skills in the course of about 20 (average) h. The current study demonstrates that the inter-individual training trials can be implemented successfully as a part of the training process. Furthermore, the user-training of the system can be strengthened by using pedagogic instruments.Q: Which to use - Timestamp or timestamp? I am importing a CSV into my SQL database. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus for casting bores for mechanical connections and more particularly to such an apparatus which does not require a mask or a fixture but only a container in which the workpiece to be machined is placed. 2. Description of Related Art Various apparatuses for forming bores are known and disclosed, for example in U.S. Pat. Nos. 3,418,913; 3,686,668; 3,723,828; 4,715,115 and 4,941,113. In many of such known apparatuses, a workpiece to be formed into a bore is positioned in a container, such as a molding container, and a mask is positioned over the workpiece, with the mask defining a shape corresponding to a desired bore. The molding container is then filled with a moldable material, such as concrete, and the material, including the workpiece and the mask, is vibrated. After the material has been vibrated for a predetermined period of time, it is vibrated for a further predetermined period of time in which the material is cured, for example, by air-curing. After the material has been vibrated for the total predetermined period of time, the material is discharged from the molding container, the mask is removed, and the workpiece is then removed from the container. Because the mask is vibrated into the molding container, the container must be vibrated as the vibrating step occurs so that the mask is not displaced. Therefore, if a container is not vibrated, or if a container vibrates at a frequency which cannot accommodate the frequency of vibration required for vibration of the mask, then the mask may be displaced from the container, so that the aperture formed through the mask and the workpiece will not form an aperture of the desired shape. Additionally, if the molding container is vibrated, then large forces can be transferred to the container and to the workpiece, so that if the container is not formed from a brittle material, such as glass, or if the container is formed from a flexible material, then the container may shatter. Additionally, if the container is not formed from a material which can be vibrated, then
