More particularly, the present invention relates to a method of producing a semiconductor device having a circuit constituted by TFTs which control respective portions of a liquid crystal display device, an EL display device or the like. (2) Description of the Related Art In recent years, a technology for constituting a semiconductor device by using a semiconductor thin film (several to several hundreds of nm in thickness) formed over a substrate having an insulating surface has been paid attention. The semiconductor device is widely applied to an active matrix display device: a liquid crystal display device or an EL (electroluminescence) display device. In an active matrix liquid crystal display device, a pixel area is provided for each of a plurality of pixels arranged in matrix, and a TFT is provided as a switching element for each of the pixels. Further, a driver circuit is provided to control the TFTs. An active matrix EL display device has a pixel area provided for each pixel in a similar manner, and a TFT is provided as a switching element for each pixel. Further, a driver circuit is provided to control the TFTs. In such a semiconductor device, a semiconductor layer forming a semiconductor active region is required to be formed over the substrate in a self-aligned manner with respect to the LDD (Lightly Doped Drain) structure in order to prevent the deterioration of the ON-state current value of the TFT due to hot carriers, the OFF-
