Early Access of the IntelliType technology enabled users to create text, paragraph, figure, and tables that automatically adjust to a series of customizable editing parameters such as text size, character spacing, and character style. On September 22, 2012, at NACO 2012, Autodesk announced the discontinuation of the IntelliType product and an open beta version of AutoLISP on AutoCAD Torrent Download 2012. This was the last version of AutoLISP and the last version of AutoCAD to include IntelliType technology. AutoCAD 2015 AutoCAD 2015 is the successor to AutoCAD 2014 and AutoCAD LT 2014. Changes in AutoCAD 2015 include: Engineering GIS AutoCAD has supported the ECW (Encapsulated PostScript) file format, which was originally created by Hewlett Packard, but is more commonly known as "HP-GL" or "ECW". It is an old format that is not supported in all platforms and in some cases, even by HP itself. In response, Autodesk have created a native Engineering GIS format which is an ECW compatible format that can be read and edited by Autodesk software such as AutoCAD, AutoCAD LT and AutoCAD Civil 3D. AutoCAD has no option to edit a custom Shapefile. However, in AutoCAD 2015, there are now two options to export to a file format known as "Geodatabase". The first is the TAB format, which is the file format for a more traditional GIS database such as Oracle, MySQL, or MS Access. The second format is the ESRI "Geodatabase" format. The ESRI format is based on their own

GDB format, which means the file can be imported and edited with ESRI software. Both file formats can be edited with the tools available in Autodesk Map 3D. Raster Effects AutoCAD Raster Effects have been enhanced. In AutoCAD, Raster Effects include Adjustment layers and Raster Styles. Adjustment layers allow a user to manipulate each layer in a raster file, while Raster Styles control the properties of a specific region of a layer. Both have new features in AutoCAD 2015. In addition, there are new Raster Effects such as Node Tint and Edge Tint that allow control of the coloration ca3bfb1094
