SteamApiCallResult .Astronomers have recorded the most massive supernova yet discovered to herald the birth of a new star. “Being able to catch the birth of such a massive star provides us with an almost unique opportunity to directly observe these truly giant explosions,” said Tom Matheson of the University of California, Santa Cruz, and the lead author of a paper accepted for publication in the Astrophysical Journal Letters. The monster star was born 1.2 billion years ago in the distant outskirts of a galaxy known as the fainter, or dwarf, galaxy M66. The supernova exploded after a similarly massive star in the center of the galaxy ignited, and when it blew apart, the debris spread over a 50,000 light-year radius, making it roughly the size of a visible galaxy. It was first spotted by the Sloan Digital Sky Survey in 2007 and later reported by two other astronomers

This draft guideline is expected to take into account the background of this request and the initiatives already taken in Member States to protect workers. In the coming months the EFLM will develop the guideline and present it to the EACC Council at the 16th Conference of EACC on 22-24 July 2002 in Brussels.

Q: how to resize animation element in pygame I have designed a game as a school project and now I am having some problems with the animations. Since I can't seem to get some animations going I would like to start at the beginning. Which means that the sprite should start life at it's default size. I have found a bunch of tutorials online and they all say to use the resize function. Since I have not had any luck with that it leaves me to the question, is there a way to do so? Here is the code to the sprite I was trying to resize.

import pygame
import random
import time
pygame.init()
#screen =pygame.display.set_mode((800,600))
display=pygame.display.set_mode((800,600))

pygame.display.set_caption('Bug') screen_rect = display.get_rect() i = 0 rect = (55,275,400,300) while 6d1f23a050
