If you had a line that started with. text then it wouldn't be printed since it would be matched by the pattern. { #start a block of commands $0 #this is a "field", basically everything between the first { and } in the line. = #if the field is text and the line has a field separator $0 FS #put text, followed by a space, followed by the field and if that was text in the previous line then the result of doing a field separator. #If the previous line was empty, then that's not a match so the next line won't be printed. next #skip to the next line #If the previous line wasn't text, it'll just print whatever was in the $0 variable. #In this case that's $0 FS (the just outputted thing). #That's followed by a blank line, which means if the previous line was a match, then we print the matched line. #If the previous line wasn't text, then we just print whatever's in the $0 variable. } #end the block of commands #Tell awk to execute the block of commands { #start a block of commands print #print the line. 6d1f23a050
