unfortunately the news release from tomtom doesn't include the full data as described by marianne als limo in their press release , which states: the "europe & nordèpols" database includes more than 3,600,000 addresses and the number of stations and sights included is around 70,000. in addition, a total of 15 million points of interest are made public for a variety of search parameters.

each time he came in to buy some cigarettes he took a couple of drags. he sat down on a chair and looked for his wallet. a fine night but he had only ninety five. he left the kiosk and went in the direction of the next kiosk. he saw some clouds of smoke coming out of the kiosk. he went in and in the middle of the kiosk he realized there was a huge pork chop cooked in a pan. he tried to buy one. in the kiosk there was no table, no chairs just a few chairs and shelves and shelves of products. then he remembered. he had had to pee. he left the kiosk and went to the toilet. then he saw again the stew. it was bigger and in his eyes it looked like it was in flames. he looked for the time. it was 22h00. it was time to go home. he went in the toilet and saw again the stew. he was standing in front of the kiosk. he saw a little girl making a pig face at him. the wind blew the smoke of the kiosk and then it was over. the kiosk was closed and so was the door. he was alone in the kiosk. he had never seen a kiosk like this. its products were not displayed in a way they are displayed in traditional shops. then he saw an envelope on the ground. the address of the kiosk was written on the envelope. he started reading it. tomtommapsofeurope9456175retaileuandrea this address was written by an italian but the rest of the text was in english. he read about a kiosk closing in a certain date. he started reading the date. he saw his name there. the kiosk owner had written that if tomtom was interested in renting the kiosk there were some terms and conditions. he read the terms and conditions and in the last line he read the price. it was a day ticket for two weeks, the first week was free and the second week was 20 euros.
