Usb Vcom Port Driver Samsung Gt E2121I

hi, i am currently using a samsung gt-b3650i (the lte version of the gt-b3710i) and when i try to access the phone through adb devices command line, it says: "no such device". i have also tried to access through the usb port. using the usb port, i can access the phone, mount the filesystem, and also use the phone as a modem through a usb/adaptor. for some reason, the usb drivers just show the battery. i have tried 2 different usb ports, and 2 different drivers. it only shows the power and battery information, but no information about the phone. it used to show up with a green light, then it turned to a white light, and now it just shows the battery. any ideas? i have a samsung gt-b3650i with 4g lte and it showed up with a flashing green light when i connected it through the usb port. but now it's just a white light. i can access the phone through the usb port but not through adb. does anyone know how to get my usb vcom driver to work again? i have the gt-b3650i samsung 4g lte phone. i have installed the mediatek usb vcom driver. the phone shows up in windows 7 and 8, but not windows 10. i have tried everything i can think of, such as reinstalling the driver, uninstalling it, unplugging the phone, etc. i can access the phone through the usb port. but the phone is not recognized by adb/android studio. when i connect my samsung gt-b3650i (4g lte) phone with mediatek vcom driver it shows as a usb disk but when i try to open phone through adb devices command line it says "no such device". i have also tried with another usb port and another driver. i use windows 10. 5ec8ef588b
