In the below example, what is the difference between these two methods? What happens in the first two methods? case class User(name: String, age: Int) implicit val userFormat = Json.format[User] userApi :: getUser ~> List(User("uName", 19).as[User] //??????????? User("uName", 19) // here?????????) userApi :: toListUser ~> List(User("uName", 19).as[User] //??????????????? User("uName", 19) // here?????????) A: There is a big difference between get[T] and toList[T]. ToList is more heavy weight and it will do all the transformation to convert the specified Java list object to a Scala list. case class User(name: String, age: Int
